

PeteLandrysRealGas.com Readers:

I began researching ethanol gas issues and the problems it presents to marine engines soon after ethanol gas began showing up in Louisiana. During the process, I began to collect a list of ethanol free gas stations for boaters, hunters and fishermen to help them in finding a source of ethanol free gasoline. Over time, the project grew and grew, with the help of boaters and fishermen. At first, this was a hobby for me. When I moved my data to Louisiana Sportsman late in 2009, it really took off. The people of Louisiana Sportsman embraced my work and helped me considerably with the site. However, as reader interest and the number of ethanol free gas stations continued to grow, I was interested in expanding the website and add more information of interest to users. However, the webmaster at Louisiana Sportsman had significant work demands and was limited on the time he could spend on my site. Therefore, Louisiana Sportsman and I agreed it was time for me to launch a separate site and become an independent source for this valuable information. However, Louisiana Sportsman graciously agreed to keep a link to my new site on their website – find the link here:

All of my work and results up to this time were done at no “out of pocket” cost to me, just my time. However, when I moved from Louisiana Sportsman, it was necessary for me to accumulate personal costs to develop a new website. There were domain name costs, web hosting and website design costs. The newly designed website was launched in February, 2011. I am very excited about the new site and I do hope that it meets with your needs and expectations. We will soon begin to upgrade and make significant additions to the site. Stay tuned for upgrade announcements coming soon.

However, I can't continue to absorb these initial and recurring costs out of my pocket. I am retired and living on a modest income.

I am therefore asking readers that if you feel you have a sincere interest in seeing this site continue and if you see value in the information the website provides you, then please help me with a small donation to help me offset the cost of keeping this site operational. A 5 cent/day donation would amount to $18.25 per year. If you feel this site data and the work I put into it is worth it to you, I respectfully request that you consider a donation of between $10 – 20/ year, or whatever you can afford. All I am attempting to do is cover my initial and annual recurring cost to keep this site up and running and kept up to date for you, the readers. To donate, simply click the “Donate” button on the right hand side of the “Home Page”. You can donate through PayPal if you have an account, or directly with your credit card. Thank you for your donation!

Respectfully,
